Soweto represents the hard-fought struggle against apartheid. We look beyond the bloody legend of the 16 June 1976 uprising and behind the hardened face of resistance politics, to the core of Soweto and its people. You'll catch a glimpse of the lives of its estimated 3 million residents. The discovery of Gold in 1885 brought thousands of people from around the world to Soweto to seek their fortunes and for labor purposes. In 1976 June 16, high school students in Soweto protested for better education and most of them lost their lives in the struggle against Apartheid and better education. Now the 16th of June is called Youth day, which honors the young people who lost their lives in the struggle.
